Question: 1

You have been trying this 'Lean IT Leadership' thing out for a couple of months now, and you are getting a bit frustrated. Most of the time, your team finds your daily Gemba walks to be more disruptive than supportive to their work. They are getting a bit annoyed with the interference.

You spend around 15-20 minutes on your Gemba walk every day, and make sure that you 'visit' all teams and all stations. The rest of the day you are in your usual meetings and handle the usual issues that come up. You ask your Lean coach for advice.

- a) To discuss with your employees how to make the conversations you have during Gemba walks more value adding than disturbing.
